

Baby skunks

2009-06-22

Well the first baby skunks of the year are leaving the dens with mom trying to learn the skills that they need to survive. Duncan Wildlife Control would like to remind the public that this time of year if you see a skunk under your buildings or house it's not a good policy to remove it or deny it access to it's den as there may be baby skunks inside that are not able to fend for themselves. Leaving these babies to die of starvation is not only inhumane but it will cause odour problems and attract insects. Calling a pro when you see a skunk around your building is the best option, as we have the tools and knowledge to keep you, your property and the animals safe.
